A Brief History of the Mac Club

The original Computer Club in the Village operated only IBM type computers. In 1980, the Apple III computer was produced, and under the leadership of Sam Mitchell, the Computer Club had both computers.

In 1994, the Computer Club divided into two clubs, and the Leisure World Macintosh Users Group was formed and became its own entity. Originally, the computers were located in an annex building at Club House 2. When the Administration building on El Toro opened, the club obtained a dedicated computer room on the third floor.

In the beginning, people used the computers, and very few classes were held. In 1998, the iMac computer was introduced, and that has been the desktop computer of the Mac Club subsequently. Since that time, Apple has introduced the MacBook, iPhone, iPad, and Apple Watch. The Mac Club now conducts classes on all the above products along with individual help for residents.

The Village is fortunate that GRF provides the facility, high-speed internet, and desktop Apple computers for use by the community. This facility is the Mac Club's Learning Center or just the Mac Lab. Providing these services would not be possible without a group of dedicated volunteers. In addition to Room Supervisors, the Club has volunteers managing the equipment, finances, website, library, membership, communications, teaching, and serving on the Board of Directors.

Our annual membership is only $10 and is a way for hundreds of members to support and keep the club going. If you would like to join the club or become a volunteer, please speak to a staff member to discuss the many opportunities the Mac Club offers. The Club's website is www.theMacClub.org.
