

Bees in our Garden

Karine Pouliquen

Wednesday, January 25 at 2:00 p.m. in Clubhouse One

Karine discovered her love of bees while working on her Masters in Horticulture & Agriculture. She has worked in research concerning the impact of neocotinoids (a type of pesticide) on bees. Karine has taught a series of classes for Master Gardeners as well as to the public. She also teaches beekeeping and many other bee related courses.

Creating opportunity in our gardens for pollinators is an important way for us to help the decline in the honey bee population. Karine will inform us about the many types of bees in Southern California. She will show us how to attract them to our garden safely, including how to think like a bee.

Refreshments and a free raffle to follow.
